Why Railway Tickets are Very Long.

"Wonder you wouldn't quit building additions to these things," the traveler said, stuffing the long green excursion ticket in the side pocket of his coat. "All fool business. We'll have to pay excess baggage rates on 'em soon. Why don't you have a card or little book?"

"Transcontinental tickets are mysterious to the average traveler. Having bought one he tries to read it, but someone eludes him away from the window and he hastens to the train trusting to Providence and the conductor. Few persons know what long tickets will allow them to do if they read them, and fewer still have any idea of the intricate and yet simple system controlling them—how the money is divided. Few passengers feel perfectly at ease until the conductor has been around, scrutinized the tickets and stuck red or yellow slips in the holder's hatbands.

A road that carries a passenger only forty miles sells him a ticket for a 4,000 mile trip. "It's a matter of arithmetic and system," the chief clerk of the ticket office said. "Suppose we sell a ticket from Grand Rapids to Hamilton. The passenger travels only a few hundred miles over our line, but we sell the whole ticket. The money is divided proportionally among the several lines over which the passenger is taken. Each company gets a share depending on the length of its haul and the rate it charges a mile. The other roads keep check on us by coupons that are detached by the conductors. At the end of each month the auditors of all railroads report to a central passenger association and latter divide and remit the money collected from joint ticket sales."

There are in North America eight passenger associations. These associations have charge of making all rates in their territory. The Western Passenger association has charge of rate making in the territory between Chicago and Denver; the Central Passenger association between Chicago and Pittsburgh; the Truck Line association between Pittsburgh and New York; the New England association all lines in the North Atlantic states; the Trans-Continental association all lines from Denver to the Pacific coast. Besides these there are the southern association in the southern section of the United States; the Canadian association in Canada; and the south-western extension bureau that has charge of the land excursions to Texas and Oklahoma.

The members of the Federated clubs met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Fountain on Friday evening. There was a good attendance of both members and their gentleman friends and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Morris Johnson.

On Wednesday last occurred the marriage of County Superintendent Robert Morris to Miss Anna Johnson, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claus Johnson, in the town of Sigel.

The wedding occurred in the afternoon at 4 o'clock and there were a large number of invited guests in attendance, and after the ceremony there was a reception.

The groom, whose home is at Appleton, is well known in the county, having held the office of county superintendent during the past term, and is a most estimable young man, while the bride is the daughter of some of the best people of the town of Sigel and a young lady whom any man might be proud of. The Tribune unites with their many friends in extending the heartiest of congratulations.

A Painful Accident.

Wm. J. Nash, who works for the Central Hardware Co., met with a painful accident on Tuesday that will lay him up for some time. He was assisting in unloading some freight from a car when his foot caught and he was thrown to the ground so that a heavy bathtub that he was handling fell on him in such a manner that one of his elbows was dislocated. He was given surgical attention as soon as possible and it is not anticipated that he will suffer any permanent injury, although he will be unable to nan the shop for some time.

Church Annoucement.

At the First Moravian church Mr. Chas. Harschell will preach next Sunday morning and evening.

Want the Training School.

Marshfield Times:—Elsewhere in this issue a writeup of the Wood County Teachers' Training school shows conclusively that that institution has passed the experimental stage and become one of our most important educational institutions, entitled to a home of its own. The school deserves commendation from every standpoint and should be provided with as fine a building as the county can afford to give it, located where the school can be operated to the best advantage.

At the last two sessions of the county board the question has been brought up and the advantages of Grand Rapids as a home for the school have been thoroughly exploited, that city offering to furnish a site free of expense to the county. The board has not seen fit to place the school and the matter must soon come up for a final hearing.

And when the matter next comes before the board Marshfield as well as Grand Rapids is entitled to a hearing. This city could give such a school every conceivable aid that it could derive from location, and it is certainly on equal footing with the county seat. If the two towns are equally represented before the board and each submits any bonus offer it may be willing to hand out, the board's decision should settle the matter finally and fairly.

Married.

Frank Huser and Miss Annie Wirtz of Atford were married on Monday morning at the Catholic church in Atford, Rev. Van Sever performing the ceremony. After the ceremony there was a wedding dinner served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wirtz, and there was also a dance for the young people and a very pleasant time was had. The groom is the son of Alois Huser and is an industrious young man, and the bride is a most estimable young lady. They will make their home at Lac du Flambeau, where the groom is employed. They have a host of friends who will wish them a successful journey into life.

Can't See the Joke.

Herewith is published an extract from the Milwaukee Free Press, concerning a chicken hunt some of our local sportsmen indulged in on the first of September. It is evident that the Free Press man views life as a very serious proposition. Following is the extract:

Modern Idea of Sport.
A party of people armed with guns, but without any dogs, and without the love of sport in their hearts, started out from Grand Rapids the other day, in an automobile, bound for Fourteen Mile Creek and day's shooting of prairie chickens.

The day is said to have been delightful and the hunters are said to have found that hunting chickens in an automobile has more than ordinary advantages and experiences.

There were not many chickens—at least not many were taken—but the most attractive feature (of the day's sport) was the fact that birds were easily scared up, and no dog was needed!

The next legislature ought certainly to do two things in the matter of the game laws. It ought to make it a penal offense for such hunters as these to go after chickens at all, and it ought to make it a capital offense for any newspaper to publish such an account of their doings as the Wood County Reporter printed this week.

"No dog was needed" to "scare up" the chickens!

Great Nimrod!
What an additional advantage it would have been if these people could have found some birds sitting in the grass, if they would have stayed there until they were killed.

No dog was needed to scare up the birds, and there was the advantage of "making time."

This is what the newspaper says, and we wonder if it got its notion from the hunters.

Why, such people would dynamite trout!

They would go bird nesting in an automobile.

The most attractive feature of the delightful day's hunt was the fact that no dog was needed to scare up the birds.

Well we are mighty glad of that. Let others plot the road to wealth. Or toil where laurels may be won; Give me the royal boon of health, My faithful dog and trusty gun.

That was written when there were sportsmen; when men would not give a rap to shoot a prairie chicken that was not put up by a good dog.

GOT A SINGLE GAME

Home Team Runs in Rather Hard Luck Last Week by Losing Three Out of Four.

The local baseball team has run in rather hard luck during the past week having lost three out of the four games they have played. Two of them were exceptionally good games, however, as good as is generally put up by league teams, and when they did lose it seemed to be rather a case of hard luck.

Grand Rapids 2, Eau Claire 1.

The first one of the series was played last Wednesday afternoon with the Eau Claire league team, and this was the best game that has been seen on the local grounds this season, and was probably as good a one as was ever played here. Every man seemed to be doing his best, and it was first class. The two runs that were made came in during the third inning, when Ristow and Olson each made a run. The battery for the home team were Olson of Pitcher and Ristow, Wilson, the colored pitcher, also played with the team, but did not occupy the pitcher's box, as Olson seemed to be able to give the visitors all they could handle. The colored boy caught three flies out in center field, however, and showed that he was an all-around ball player. The lineup of the two teams were as follows:

Eau Claire—Baker, Head, Jones, McCawley, Bailey, Ramsey, Gold, Smith, Maxwell and Fiske.

Grand Rapids—Powell, Ristow, Wilson, Bandelin, Krentz, Dulin, Weckler, Hetzel and Olson.

Marshfield 2, Grand Rapids 1.

The first game with Marshfield was played on Thursday morning at the fair being held in that city. This was a close game, being 2 and 1 in favor of Marshfield. Those who saw this contest stated that it was a star game, and the Marshfield people stated that it was the best that had ever been played in that city. The only run for the home team was made by Powell in the eighth inning, who has formed a habit of getting a few good larpups on the ball during a game and generally gets around the bases once or twice. The lineup was:

Marshfield—Helixon, Wheelock, Schmitz, McCormick, Rayver, Quinn, Patterson, Troch, and Tallant.

Grand Rapids—Powell, Dulin, Bandelin, Weckler, McCormick, Krentz, Chesley, Barlow and Hetzel.

Hetzel and McConnell were the battery for the home team, and Troch and Patterson for Marshfield.

Marshfield 7, Grand Rapids 4.

Friday's game was a hard luck story all around. Neither side played with the vim that they showed the day before, and several errors were made on both sides. Marshfield took the lead in the first inning and held it thru to the end. The lineup of the teams was:

Grand Rapids—Bandelin, Dulin, Weckler, Pelot, Powell, Krentz, McConnell, Hetzel and Barlow.

Marshfield—Helixon, Wheelock, Revoyor, Troch, Staess, Patterson, Wapfor, Schmitz and Tallant.

Portage 9, Grand Rapids 8.

The game with Portage on Sunday resulted in a victory for the visitors by a majority of one point. The home boys held them down pretty well until the sixth inning, when the visitors ran in four scores, which gave them a lead that the home team was unable to overcome, altho they made two runs in the seventh and two in the eighth.

Ross of Green Bay pitched the first six innings for the home team, and the visitors were finding his curves in a manner that made it very discouraging for all concerned. Then Barlow was put in the box and he laid the Portage boys where they were the remainder of the game. The game was a most orderly one from start to finish, and neither side had a word to say about the decisions of Umpire Laraine at any time in the game. The lineup of the teams was as follows:

Portage—Bachman, Heinicke, Lantierbach, Neiman, Dempsey, Nenghauer, Gutknecht, Sinder and Rainer.

Grand Rapids—Powell, Dulin, Weckler, Bandelin, Krentz, Pelot, Ross, Hetzel, McConnell, Barlow.

An Entertaining Talker.

Keyo Sae Inne, the Japanese orator that spoke at the Methodist church on Sunday evening, entertained a large audience by his address. He is the young man who recently won first prize in oratory in a contest involving many of the universities of the west, and the remarkable part of it was that it was after studying in this country only six years.

He is a bright young man and spoke very enthusiastically of what Christianity has done for Japan.

Night School at the Business College.

The popular night school at the Business College will open Tuesday evening, October 2. This affords a fine opportunity for those who are employed during the day to get a business education or a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting and at very little expense.

Students are given individual attention and instruction, and may progress rapidly as they can complete the required work.

Special work may be arranged for those who desire it.

For further information call on or address the principal, E. L. Hayward.

Ira Wood, Almond; Fred Beglton; Plainfield; Kate Lake, Jolia Minnehan, Jennie Kuntz, Francis Shea, Iva Woodell, Juanita Jackson, Lydia Lemense, Genevieve Carlson, Alth Kandy, Howard Pavell, and Mabel Hamilton, City; Addie Bishop, Loy; Belva Daniels, Babcock; Resa Smith, Friendship; Mabel Gauchier, Arpin; and Joe Komherec, Neudahl.

Some Fine Decorations.

The interior decorations in the Catholic church were completed on Saturday, and that part of the edifice now presents a most handsome appearance. The decorations are out of the ordinary and most beautiful and artistic, and it is doubtful if there is another church in this section that presents as nice an appearance. The exterior of the building is also being painted.

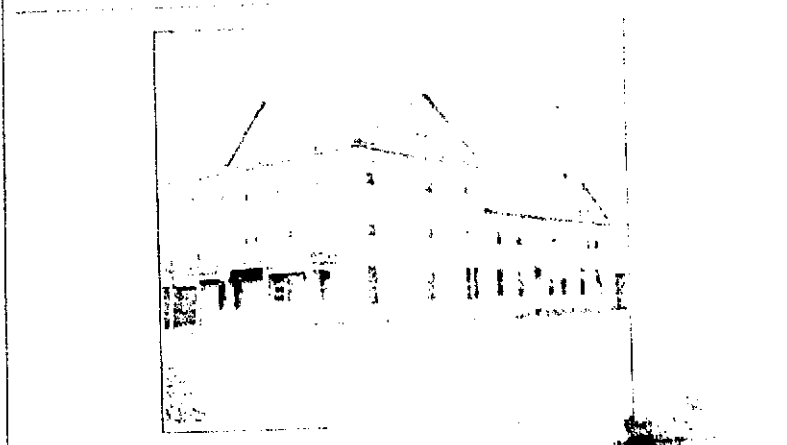

New windows, floor, pews and altars will also be installed before the work is completed, when the church will be practically an entirely new structure.

Will Open Blacksmith Shop.

Bert Palmer has leased the Saul Preston premises on the west side and about the first of October expects to open up the blacksmith and repair shop, and engage in the handling of buggies and autos. Joseph Yeaka will do the blacksmithing work at the place.

The Rescue Home at Babcock.

We present herewith a picture of the Rescue Home that has recently been established at Babcock, and which promises to be one of the prominent institutions of the county. Attendance will increase when it becomes generally known that there is such an institution.

The building in which the home is located was formerly a hotel, and was known as the Oakland, but in this capacity it received very little use, and when the present proprietors acquired possession of the place it was entirely remodeled and fixed up especially for the purpose for which it is now being used. The home is under the supervision of Miss Mary Holmstrom, who has been in the similar work the greater part of her life, and the secretary, J. T. Wagoner, also assists in the management of the place, and a V. H. Muse of Babcock is the home physician. The consulting physicians are Dr. J. H. Demanville and C. A. Homan, of this city, Dr. C. E. Quigley of Tomah, W. N. Daniels of Mosinee and Dr. J. W. Rockwell of this city and J. H. Homan of Marshfield.

Death of A. H. Colcord.

He is survived by two sons and a daughter the boys being Harry and Hubert and for some time past they have been in the west where they were working. They have been communicated with and it is expected that they will be here in time for the funeral.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of George Courtney, the deceased of the local U. S. A. R. post will have charge of the services at the grave.

Training School Plenic.

Thru the kindness of E. P. Arpin the members of the Wood County Training school were given an outing on Saturday. Mr. Arpin chartered a special car for the party and they were taken to Cranmoor, where they were shown the methods of the fruit and other interesting things. The day was very pleasantly spent and the members are loud in their praise of Mr. Arpin's hospitality.

Exhibit of Art.

An educational Art Exhibition will be given in Grand Rapids, the first week in October, in the Wood block opposite the Post office, under the auspices of the Women's Federation of Clubs. The objects to be gained in this exhibition are first: the raising of a fund for the purchase of pictures to adorn the school walls, and second, to interest the teachers, scholars and general public in the work of art in the schools, and the educational advantages to be derived from a knowledge of the world's art history as shown in the masterpieces of architecture, painting and sculpture. The hours and dates will be given later, as soon as the details are definitely arranged.

DASHING WOMEN OPERATE LOVE SYNDICATE IN NEW YORK

WINSOME "WIDOWS" SPIDER WEB CAUGHT ONE HUNDRED RICH DUPES WHO WALKED INTO IT WILLINGLY.

One of the Victims Told His Story to the District Attorney and the Syndicate Came to an Untimely End—Secured $100,000 While It Worked.

New York.—It Robert Emmet Keene, actor, wit and adviser in the court of love operated by Mrs. Lillian Brown and Mrs. George T. Verrault, had not used his judgment and let James V. MacClellan, the obscure Philadelphia grocer, into the West Seventy-third street mansion, all the fuss about the love syndicate might have been avoided. It was Keene who used to devote his time to the women who used to come to him for love advice. When he passed favorably upon MacClellan he let in the man who, when ruthlessly rejected by the charming Mrs. Verrault, promptly went to the United States district attorney.

The extent to which the love syndicate operated has amazed the district attorney. It is calculated that in the three years during which the combine earned its victims more than $100,000 was taken from them. A census of the dupes shows that they range from prosperous store owners to millinery. Wall street attorneys. Probably one hundred of them walked into the spider web.

Four women figured in the active work of the love trust. Mrs. Brown, shrewd and fascinating, was the schemer who kept the syndicate afloat. Mrs. Verrault was the official letter writer. It was she who wrote the captivating letters that won the hearts of the susceptible dupes. She attended to the correspondence of both herself and Mrs. Brown.

The golden-haired daughter of Mrs. Brown was a conspicuous member of the combination. She did not make love to any of the men nor receive their attentions, but it was handy to have her around as lady's maid. The same interesting role was assumed by Mrs. Brown's daughter, Miss Mary Mason. To the niece of Mrs. Brown, it may be said that she watched those two damsels with the eye of a hawk and never permitted the slightest indiscretion so far as they were concerned. The two girls when not engaged in the palace of love had the time of their lives in going about the country with Mrs. Brown.

The niece is the daughter of a struggling Boston cooper. He always held a high regard for his sister, and feeling that she could provide his daughter with better advantages than he was able to afford sent her to New York. Mrs. Brown's scheme to marry the girl to a New Yorker of wealth was given a rude shock when the girl eloped with a man she really loved. She met her husband while attending a regional ball to which Mrs. Brown had taken her.

Gregory Allen, who was one of the butlers in the Brown-Verrault household, knew this young man and introduced him to the blue-eyed beauty. It was love at first sight. Three months from the day of the wedding Miss Mason broke away from the influence of the love combine. Gregory Allen had been very much smitten with Miss Mason herself. When she fled him he got bravely over it and fell in love with Mrs. Brown's daughter.

The Married Man Is It

By STITCH McCARTHY.
New York City Ward Politician and Patron of Sports.

It's the women who give us character so our men friends ain't afraid to speak out in the open about it if they want to hand us a little hot air, and it's the women who give us the characters that make men tell lies after being seen talking to us.

Women make us lusty because we know if we haven't got the price we'll get talked about, and if they think we're lazy they'll talk about your wife and say: "Poor thing, she has to do all the work."

Women make us see how little we count in the game if we don't do all the things that women think men should do in the day's work.

Women say a lot of things they don't mean, because talk is about the only pasture the most of them have. But when a woman is boosting for your success she tells the truth, and that's why so many fellows say women ain't got any sense because they tell the truth.

skyrocket company exploded, leaving a large number of financiers holding bogus stock. Angell felt like treading his son-in-law, but never could find him.

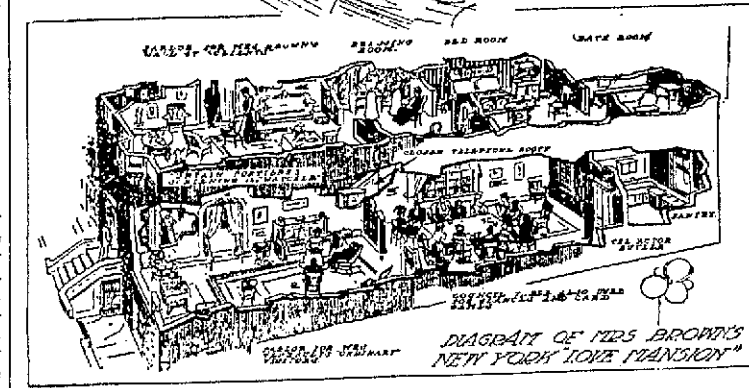

This chimerical concern procured its victims by advertising in newspapers and also through the means of the spiritualistic seances that were a part of the matrimonial plans.

Matrimonial Mansion Was Elaborately Fitted Out.

The matrimonial mansion was fitted out in a way calculated to inspire the dupes. Each room has a name according to the kind of paper on the wall. The parlor was the green room, because it had green paper with little apaches of pink. The library was furnished in red. All the books were of red.

Mrs. Brown had a red room on the third floor which harmonized with her blond hair. Mrs. Verrault's boudoir was of a delicate pink.

Mrs. Verrault and Mrs. Brown were always very careful about receiving their guests. Each of the women would have three men a week calling upon them. Mrs. Brown had a large town, and to their great satisfaction discovered that they could have it at a rental which they could pay without too much difficulty.

When they consulted their friends and stated that the house was a gem, but that it had been idle for a long while and the landlord was willing to let it go for a wonderfully small sum, they were haunted, possibly ghosts trailed about it in the night. A crime might have been committed there, giving the house a bad name. A physician suggested that it might prove to be a place where tuberculosis or other infectious diseases had been concealed. Notwithstanding these suspicions the daring young couple determined on taking the house.

To my mind its greatest fault was the fact that it had windows only in front. It was sandwiched in between taller buildings and built closely up against the side walls of houses on either side of the way. It had no glimpse of sky and for ventilation it depended wholly on the front door and windows. What could be done with such a house? How could it be made to look like a cheery home? Added to everything else, it was only a single room in width, although the length was the finest passages and the stairways were ladders. An undertaker happened to call one day on the young husband. His call was about a political matter, both men belonging to a Good Government club in the neighborhood. The undertaker, a betwixt and a professional reformer, "How on earth," he exclaimed, "could I ever get a coffin down these stairs?" The remark was gruesome, but it did not frighten the occupants of the house. They coped with the situation. These young people dwelled, started in doing so, but they did not mean to live in a cave.

The first step was to paint the entire house from top to bottom a pure dazzling white. They put one coat after another on walls and woodwork, finishing at last with an enamel of fairly bright light and white does on a wintry day. To the white they added glintings of gold or yellow. The picture moldings were of gold, and wherever any relief was introduced against the monotony of the white, it was in shades of yellow or gold. The window-seats were covered with cushions and draperies in this tint. Tables and chairs were white. The book shelves were white, and wherever a vase of flowers could be brought into a room it was so managed as to carry out the color scheme and intensify it. Daffodils, yellow roses, occasionally a great bunch of white flowers with a vivid red to set it off, and often bunches of mignonette or red geraniums gave an impression of brightness which was never lost sight of. The walls were white and pale yellow silk. Everywhere the house expressed an exceeding brightness and a perfect harmony. In the living-room, above a group of palms, a canary in its cage poured out a flood of music. The rugs were all of the palest tint, nothing dark being admitted within the doors. These young people remained in this house for several years, spending their winters very happily there and suffering from no illness. It should be added that they were both greatly given to walking and outdoor exercise, and that they spent many hours of every week beyond the door within the doors of their pretty home.

Thousands of people in the larger cities are compelled to live in apartments that have no sunshine and that are almost as gloomy as caverns. Some of these houses and apartments have almost no light at all, and depend for cheer upon gas and electricity. In furnishing, the indispensable requisite is choice of the right coloring. Avoid deep reds, pale blues, olive shades and neutral tints. White and yellow, which would be too glaring in the sunlight, produce an effect of sunshine when properly used.

Lace Gloves. Lace gloves will be one of the novelties of the fall and winter season. Every fashionable woman will affect them. The largest supply comes from Germany. The gloves are wonderfully fine and of pure silk.

They will not be comfortable wear, but who cares for comfort as against a dash of fashion? Lace is not strictly a glove material, but its defect in this respect has been overcome by the insertion of small strips of elastic at all the points where pliability is needed most. These strips are wrought in beautifully and hardly distinguishable from the lace itself.

In the back of the hand the elastic is made to look like threading. But in no degree of quality does the elastic make the glove as easy to the hand as kid.

A Word About Blouses. Nothing prettier in a separate blouse than the lingerie blouse at its simplest, but a thing so costly that the buyer, if it is extravagance in the average woman, as is the case in a few

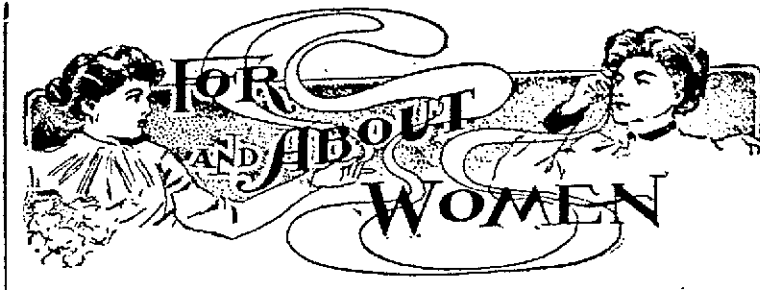

Women make you want to get out in the morning and get into action because you don't want to be shy when it comes to settling day, and they make you want to get in at night because most of 'em will do more to make you comfortable than any one else, and the fellow who don't like to be comfortable has something wrong in him.

Since I have been married I have seen some wives that I thought a hard slap on the wrist would do a lot of good to, but no one ever wants to take on the job of doing it, because other women would say you're a brute.

I've had fellows tell me they couldn't get along with their wives if they didn't hand them a slap once in awhile, but I'd rather pay alimony than do that, and I guess, if the truth was known, there's few of us men that don't need a good slap once in awhile ourselves, because it's so easy to get sassy in your own house.

I ain't trying to make rules for married people to live by, and I ain't trying to be wise about it, because every day I get into the fact that I know less about it.

Many folks are unhappy married, and they can't see why anybody should be a tout for the game, but so far as I am concerned, it's the whole pantry with all the grocery bills paid, and I'm saying that if all the people could be as happy as me and Mrs. Stith is, the world would be a continuous "laugh-fest," and so many people that try to make a hit of it that I say for one, Get married, for single life is H—L, and here's to Mrs. Stith. God bless her!

Make the Home Bright

LIGHT COLORS WILL DO MUCH FOR SUNLESS ROOMS.

Small Outlay of Money and a Little Planning Work Wonders—To Make the Best of Your Surroundings.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Never live in a sunless room if you can help it. If you are compelled to live on the north side of the house or in a narrow street where little sunshine comes, make the best of your bargain and introduce an effect of light and cheer in your furnishings. The thing can be done, but to do it requires a little planning.

A young couple who had artistic tastes and very slender means found a little house in a retired but rather aristocratic quarter of a large town, and to their great satisfaction discovered that they could have it at a rental which they could pay without too much difficulty.

When they consulted their friends and stated that the house was a gem, but that it had been idle for a long while and the landlord was willing to let it go for a wonderfully small sum, they were haunted, possibly ghosts trailed about it in the night. A crime might have been committed there, giving the house a bad name. A physician suggested that it might prove to be a place where tuberculosis or other infectious diseases had been concealed. Notwithstanding these suspicions the daring young couple determined on taking the house.

To my mind its greatest fault was the fact that it had windows only in front. It was sandwiched in between taller buildings and built closely up against the side walls of houses on either side of the way. It had no glimpse of sky and for ventilation it depended wholly on the front door and windows. What could be done with such a house? How could it be made to look like a cheery home? Added to everything else, it was only a single room in width, although the length was the finest passages and the stairways were ladders. An undertaker happened to call one day on the young husband. His call was about a political matter, both men belonging to a Good Government club in the neighborhood. The undertaker, a betwixt and a professional reformer, "How on earth," he exclaimed, "could I ever get a coffin down these stairs?" The remark was gruesome, but it did not frighten the occupants of the house. They coped with the situation. These young people dwelled, started in doing so, but they did not mean to live in a cave.

The first step was to paint the entire house from top to bottom a pure dazzling white. They put one coat after another on walls and woodwork, finishing at last with an enamel of fairly bright light and white does on a wintry day. To the white they added glintings of gold or yellow. The picture moldings were of gold, and wherever any relief was introduced against the monotony of the white, it was in shades of yellow or gold. The window-seats were covered with cushions and draperies in this tint. Tables and chairs were white. The book shelves were white, and wherever a vase of flowers could be brought into a room it was so managed as to carry out the color scheme and intensify it. Daffodils, yellow roses, occasionally a great bunch of white flowers with a vivid red to set it off, and often bunches of mignonette or red geraniums gave an impression of brightness which was never lost sight of. The walls were white and pale yellow silk. Everywhere the house expressed an exceeding brightness and a perfect harmony. In the living-room, above a group of palms, a canary in its cage poured out a flood of music. The rugs were all of the palest tint, nothing dark being admitted within the doors. These young people remained in this house for several years, spending their winters very happily there and suffering from no illness. It should be added that they were both greatly given to walking and outdoor exercise, and that they spent many hours of every week beyond the door within the doors of their pretty home.

Thousands of people in the larger cities are compelled to live in apartments that have no sunshine and that are almost as gloomy as caverns. Some of these houses and apartments have almost no light at all, and depend for cheer upon gas and electricity. In furnishing, the indispensable requisite is choice of the right coloring. Avoid deep reds, pale blues, olive shades and neutral tints. White and yellow, which would be too glaring in the sunlight, produce an effect of sunshine when properly used.

Lace Gloves. Lace gloves will be one of the novelties of the fall and winter season. Every fashionable woman will affect them. The largest supply comes from Germany. The gloves are wonderfully fine and of pure silk.

They will not be comfortable wear, but who cares for comfort as against a dash of fashion? Lace is not strictly a glove material, but its defect in this respect has been overcome by the insertion of small strips of elastic at all the points where pliability is needed most. These strips are wrought in beautifully and hardly distinguishable from the lace itself.

In the back of the hand the elastic is made to look like threading. But in no degree of quality does the elastic make the glove as easy to the hand as kid.

A Word About Blouses. Nothing prettier in a separate blouse than the lingerie blouse at its simplest, but a thing so costly that the buyer, if it is extravagance in the average woman, as is the case in a few willow ware. The baskets are beautifully woven in natural color and the fruit dish is of the French gray finish. The single basket costs $17.50 and the double one $27.50.

For fruit also is the china dish included in the group. It is designed to hold a baked apple server, the depression in the center being large enough to hold a big apple. It is also used for the serving of canteloupes.

Patriotism Unrewarded. When the last census was taken in France the mayor of Montmartre, in the town, thought he would save his townspeople trouble, so he filled up the papers himself. Reflecting that France is threatened with depopulation, he added to each family a boy here and a girl there, and occasionally a pair of twins. He increased the population of Montmartre on paper by about 100 souls. For this an ungrateful government has taken his office from him.

Much Money Sent to Italy. A single bank in Naples receives half a million dollars a year sent out of the United States by temporary Italian residents. The same bank has received from Italians in Argentina and Brazil $225,000 and $125,000, respectively, in one year.

A Rich Possession. This was over my chief prayer: A piece of ground, not too large, with a garden, and a spring of never-failing water near my house, and a little woodland beside—Morace.

HAY FEVER

"Having used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever, I can recommend it to all who are suffering with these diseases. I am happy to say it has helped me wonderfully."—Maya E. Smith.

While hats have shrunk in size for the last year, and this is good news for the hat lover, who will not permit himself to wear the real article. The artificial hat is just as handsome, just as lifelike, just as fetching, and it is said to wear a great deal better. Moreover, its colors are more enduring for it can be dyed into delicate shades which just match the gown.

A novel fashion exhibition has just taken place in New York. It was of peculiar interest to the feminine world for two reasons. First, because it served as an indication of the fashions that are to come; and the second reason of its interest can be attributed to the fact that the exhibition was for the benefit of the charity of the sick. It was one of the last of the sales conducted for the California sufferers, and the money netted was devoted to the furnishing of clothes for the women school teachers benefit by the first.

Of peculiar interest was the theater hat room, for here was an alcove devoted to the display of the coming theater hats of fall and winter. These hats were so small that one is perfectly justified in predicting that the reign of the big theater hat is over, and the succeeding picture hat, the sport hat, the aggressive but picturesque English walking hats and the plateau and the Amazon, all seem to be a thing of the past where theater hats are concerned, as a study of the new hats will indicate.

USEFUL HOUSEHOLD HINTS. A tablespoonful of paraffine added to each three gallons of water when boiling white clothes will help to remove the stains.

If you are one of those people who would love to make bread if it were not for washing up the dishes, try greasing the bread pan all over inside with lard, or use a bread mixer.

If salt is added to the water in which eggs are boiled, it will be found an advantage in case any of the eggs should be cracked. The egg will boil until done, without any of the white part leaking out of the shell.

If a pinch of soda be put in cold water, and enough of the water is added to it, the Housekeeper tells us that there will be no disagreeable odor during the cooking process if the cooking vessel is left uncovered. Will the Housekeeper now tell us a satisfactory way to "deodorize" the odorous onion?

Plenty of padding, composed of old carpet, quilt, etc., placed on each stair step under the carpet, not only lessens the noise, but materially lengthens the life of the carpet. In the same way a good padding of newspapers placed on the kitchen table or shelves, under the oil cloth, doubles or triples the life of the cloth.

Those who find nothing so restful and cooling as a cold bath, when the summer, should add a handful of salt to the bath water. Nothing else had such a tonic effect or makes one feel more fresh and rested. Many use salt in the cold water also. They consider that its invigorating effect lessens the tendency to taking cold.

Real woolen dresses are an economical investment for little girls' school dresses. A soft red wool is becoming to almost any child. These little dresses are very easily washed. Warm soap suds should be used. Lay them in a tub over a square. Lay each one in a tub over a small half-pint basin and spread with boiled rice about half an inch thick. Put in the center quarters of peeled, sour tender apples, then with the cloth work the rice over the fruit until smoothly covered.

Tie up the cloth closely and proceed in this way until all are mended. Steam three-quarters of an hour and serve with sweetened cream.

Orange Juice in Salad. A delicacy which few northern persons are acquainted with is the juice of the native Florida orange, used as the acid in salad dressing. It is an improvement on lemon juice for the purpose, and quite different from elder vinegar.

NOT IN TOUCHABLE MOOD. "Do you know, I feel like asking you for a pound or two to go shopping with?"

It is believed that the position of names on the ballot had much to do with the nomination of candidates for the state offices below governor in the primaries last week. The names are arranged alphabetically on the ballot and it is found that for every office the successful candidate was the one whose name came first on the list. This may not have affected the vote of governor, as public interest was centered on the contest for that nomination. But in the minor offices there was little general interest and not much knowledge of candidates. It is probable that a large proportion of the voters simply marked the name they came to for each office. Under such circumstances the men whose names began with L, M, P, S, or T fared badly as compared with the B's, C's, D's, F's and G's.

Sawyer's term of office expires this year, and a number of well known women have been suggested to succeed her. Among them are Mrs. P. E. Teetsch, Green Bay; Mrs. Moberly, Fond du Lac; Mrs. O. A. Emerson, Beloit; and Mrs. Faany Galloway Eau Claire.

It is believed that the position of names on the ballot had much to do with the nomination of candidates for the state offices below governor in the primaries last week. The names are arranged alphabetically on the ballot and it is found that for every office the successful candidate was the one whose name came first on the list. This may not be a public interest was centered on the contest for that nomination. But in this minor offices there was little general interest and not much knowledge of candidates. It is probable that a large proportion of the voters simply marked the first name they came to for each office. Under such circumstances the men whose names began with L, M, P, S, or T fared badly as compared with the B's, C's, D's, E's and G's.

Crop of 1906.

From advices published in Fruit Trade Journal, the yield of this season will be one that will be devoid of the extremes that marked the years of 1904 and 1905, and a healthy tone is looked for.

Some of early shipments were not as highly colored as the trade generally looked for, but the weather is reported favorable for maturing the crop, and bulk of stock should be of a satisfactory character.

Harvest hands have been in good demand, and the gathering of the crop is reported as progressing as expeditiously as possible.

But few marches have their full quota of laborers, or at least as the season advances there is the desire to hasten the harvesting also if good weather should prevail the delay would not be without advantage as to quantity and quality of berry.

Prices are not yet fully settled but quotations are for early shipments at 75 to 80 with expectation of late berries commanding 75 to 80.

Altho the quantity of other fruits is spoken of as affecting the price of cranberries, the view is held that as a matter of fact, it does not cut the figure attributed to that a demand exists of itself, which with judicious handling will market the crop in a steady and desirable course.

Under present market stock is expected to go forward in good shape, and the good results of many seasons to the interests of all concerned.

Faise Army Worm

Prof. Franklin in his address before the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' Association had the following to say concerning Massachusetts insect pest, now the subject of expert investigation.

"In the north part of this cranberry region, during the months of May and June, an insect resembling the true army worm quite closely was found to be more or less injurious on the majority of crops. I have bred the adult of this insect, but not having literature at hand, have not determined the species. For convenience I will speak of it as the false army worm. It resembles the true army worm so closely that I was at first led to misidentify it as the true army worm. This insect has, but a single brood a year, and the eggs are laid in the fall in masses and are usually on the under side of the leaves, in the neighborhood of thirty or forty eggs in a mass. The eggs pass the winter on the vines and retain their vitality, be the bog dry or winter flooded. This year the eggs were noticed to have begun hatching as early as the seventh of May, and they hatched pretty well together. It is possible that in some seasons the time of hatching would be earlier. The worms, when first hatched, are very small and light colored, but as they grow, without spots or marks, but when viewed with the lens are seen to be covered with black spots, from each of which there arises a single hair. At this stage they resemble spin worms in their mode of progression of 'loping' as they move along. These worms grow rapidly later, soon losing their 'loping' movement, casting off several skins during the process and soon take the markings and appearance of the adult worm. These differ from the true army worm in having light spots down the back, which are noticeable in the army worm, and having a head of clear yellow or greenish color. They differ in habit also from the true army worm, devouring the leaves and buds of the new growth heavily, while the true army worm was hurriedly over the vines, biting off a bud or a leaf, or even the entire new growth to let it fall to the bottom and dry up and decay.

The young worms do considerable injury before the new growth starts to any extent by eating into and destroying the buds from which the fruit bearing the new growth is to spring. The worms reach the adult condition and enter the ground to go into the quiescent pupal state about the first of July, where they remain for a considerable length of time as worms 'waiting for the change. General pupation does not take place before the middle of August. The first males however emerge early in August and more and more of them emerge as the season advances. These males are large and heavy and of a rich brown color. It is known that they attack quite a variety of plants besides the cranberry. By holding the water of the foliage until the middle of May the eggs may probably be, for the most part, destroyed without producing worms. To make the thing perfectly safe it would perhaps be better to hold until the 20th of May. If the bog has an abundant water supply so that it may be reflooded at any time reflooding should be done by the middle of May to prevent the injury.

If worms appear later a second reflooding may be done, if, however, there is only water for a single reflooding, it would perhaps be better to wait until the 20th or even the 25th of May as the matter of frost has usually to be taken into consideration before the reflooding is done. On dry bogs our only resort is again the spraying with some poison. It is probable that if spraying with arsenate of lead be done early in May, before the eggs hatch and before the new growth has started (while the leaves at the summit of the upright are standing up rightly around the bud to form a receptacle) it will be found to be a satisfactory treatment, as the water containing the poison will evaporate and drop the poison onto the bud. As white oil soap is found to effect the strong mature worm very strongly it is not improbable that when the vines are thin this may be used effectively against the small worms. It is found that the worms, after they have become considerably developed will eat the vines bearing a considerable amount of arsenate of lead without being apparently much affected. The new growth is also developing very rapidly when these worms become pretty well advanced and it is doubtful if enough poison could be applied by means of a spray at this time to make spraying at all satisfactory as a means of treatment. At the time when these worms were approaching maturity there appeared on the bogs where they were present on the uprights some bogs in great numbers white caterpillars. These proved to be the covering of a number of larvae, the larvae being the young of a parasitic insect. I have since bred this from other caterpillars but it is probably for the most part a parasite on the false army worm and is therefore a beneficial rather than injurious insect.

An Important Meeting.

In the Warehouse (Mass.) Courier is given an account of the most successful meeting of the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' Association ever held, which occurred in Wareham on Tuesday, August 21st, at Odd Fellows Hall. The attendance was unusually large, comprising about 300 cranberry growers, 30 railroad agents and representatives of several commission houses. More new members than usual were admitted to the society and the enthusiasm and interest of the day was much greater than usual.

Meeting called to order by the President George R. Briggs, records of the last meeting read by the Secretary W. W. Marsh, and approved a nominating committee composed of Eudorus Small, J. F. Carlton, G. L. Suddley and Franklin Crocker, reported to have all the officers the same as last year, and the secretary was authorized to cast a single ballot for the following:

President—George R. Briggs, Plymouth. First Vice-President—John C. Macomber, Wareham. Second Vice-President—Joshua Crowell, East Duxbury. Secretary—William W. Marsh, Wareham. Treasurer—Irving C. Hammond, Onset.

Executive Committee—Franklin P. Marsh, M. D., Wareham; J. K. Robbins, Harwich; Alonzo P. Hainlin, South Carver; William F. Makepeace, West Barnstable; J. A. Poles, Mashpee; Seth O. O. Pinney, Carver; C. C. Wood, Plymouth.

Professor Franklin was then introduced by the president as follows: "I presume that all of you are aware that during this year we have had among us a representative from Cape Cod Agricultural College who has spent his time in investigating the insects and we feel that this has been successful. So you have no doubt met Prof. Franklin. Mr. Franklin has given a long hard summer's work and he is here today to tell us something about the results. I now introduce to you Mr. Franklin. Mr. Franklin spoke as follows:

"Probably there is no other subject on which anyone would address you that would be of more interest than the insects injurious to cranberries, and perhaps it would be of interest to us to know just exactly how much this injury has amounted to in a period of years. The amount of this injury has undoubtedly been much greater than most growers would estimate. It is probable that in the years here present have suffered more or less from insect attack, hence it is natural that there should be a common interest in these matters.

"I think that perhaps the best way to make this subject plain to begin with. The first insect which demanded my attention was what is variously known as the fire worm, cranberry worm, black head, black headed, cranberry worm. This insect passes the winter in the egg state, the eggs surviving both on dry bogs and when covered with water. The insect seems to be more destructive on winter flooded bogs, due apparently to the fact that the water acts as an actual protection against the severity of winter weather. The eggs this year began hatching the 11th of May. They were apparently into this year, as I am told in some seasons they begin hatching during the last days of April. The eggs are very numerous in the time of hatching, the hatching period lasting apparently for at least two weeks. The eggs are found on the under side of the leaves, usually a single egg to each leaf, but they sometimes reach a half dozen or more. They are elliptical in shape flattened about half the size of a pin head and resemble a fly speck more than anything else. The worms that hatch from them develop rapidly and reach maturity in about three weeks from the time of hatching. These worms are usually of a pale yellowish green color with a black head and collar. On hatching from the eggs they burrow immediately into the egg shell from which they have hatched in the process and become completely buried from view. All that indicates their presence being the small particle of excrement which covers their point of entrance and on the upper side of the leaf immediately over this, a light colored spot. After feeding on the inside of the leaf on which they are hatched for a day or two, they come out and go toward the tips of the uprights where they spin the leaves together. This spinning up of the tips in the case of the first brood is not especially noticeable on most bogs as the new growth has not at that time developed to any extent. Only on bogs where the new growth has especially early start or on portions of bogs where the new growth has started earlier than on the remainder is this spinning up usually noticeable. The worms come to maturity late in May or early in June and having reached maturity they come down out of the vines and rest on the bottom for a day or two before passing into the quiescent state of pupation in which the change from worm to moth is perfected. The period of pupation lasts for about a week when the moths come forth to lay their eggs for a second brood. The eggs of this second brood begin to hatch very early in July.

"They are exactly the same in appearance as the eggs that produce the first brood. The young worms on hatching act in the same way as do those of the first brood in all particulars except that here the spinning up of the tips is very noticeable and the length of development is about a week shorter. The worms reach maturity within about two weeks from the time of hatching. When they come down from the vines as did those of the first brood they change over in the same way into the small dark colored moths which fly for a short time, deposit the eggs which are to pass the winter and disappear for the season. The methods of control must necessarily vary with bog conditions. Where there is sufficient water supply for a complete reflood they can probably be cleared from the bog if the reflooding is done at the right time. It is very doubtful if in Massachusetts the majority of cases they can be reached by the late holding of water which I have seen bogs in which the winter flow was held as late as the third of June, and on which after the water was taken off a very plentiful and injurious crop of worms made their appearance, and I observed no bog on which the late holding of water was tried where the work of getting rid of the first worm was successful. On account of the duration of the hatching period of the first brood reflooding should not be attempted until there is a good chance that this period is passed. Where it is contemplated to rid a bog of the first worms the water should be drawn off and no reflooding done for any case whatever until the first of the first worms have reached maturity and are about to pupate. It is doubtful if reflooding, if it is done after the pupation is completed, will be found in most cases to be satisfactory unless the water is held for three or four days, as in summing experiments in which normal bog conditions were imitated as closely as possible, I had a most complete army being under water forty-four hours. Following for this length of time at the time when these worms are in the pupae or quiescent state would probably be risky as the new growth is well developed at this time. It is necessary therefore to watch the progress of the development of the worms carefully and when they are noticed beginning to leave the vines, the water should be put on. Some of the bog where the vines are this or where new vines have been set out or which have been heavily matted should be watched especially as on these spots the first worms may be expected to arrive at maturity. On dry bogs the only method of treatment which we have recourse to is that of spraying with some arsenical poison, of these arsenates of lead is probably the best and if applied at the right time it applied thoroughly and with proper spraying apparatus it will undoubtedly prove effective in most cases. It is necessary however in this treatment to spray for both broods and the spraying should be done when the worms are first noticed beginning to hatch. One can tell very readily when the eggs are about to hatch as they usually turn dark colored before hatching. If one is acquainted with the appearance of the eggs he will have some forewarning in the case of the second brood by means of a few tips which become spun up in advance of the others.

"The bucket pump arrangement which has been used by some of the smaller growers extensively is, as I have observed it, an unsatisfactory arrangement, as it is a raw workman who will have the patience to do the work thoroughly with such apparatus. I found that there was a great difference of opinion concerning the use of arsenate of lead as an insecticide for the control of the fire worm, and to prove or disprove its value for my own satisfaction I had plots started out on different bogs and directed carefully the spraying as to the time when it should be done, watching for the hatching of the worm. I had especial pains taken with the portions of the bog immediately surrounding these plots. In these trials the arsenate of lead proved very satisfactory. The bog immediately surrounding the plots being practically clean of the worm, while the plots were themselves quite severely 'burned'.

Prof. Franklin's remarks on the so-called army worm are quite of special interest, as well as the interesting details of the convention are reserved for future reference.

Gathering Crop.

The month of September is generally devoted to harvesting the crop, some varieties being mature enough to pick the first week, and the fruit generally being ready by the 10th. Reports received indicate a fairly good crop all over the growing districts.

In the west, hand picking is preferred on account of the condition of the marshes, but in the East raking or scoping is more generally employed.

The cost of the latter is of course much less, but in order to be practical the bogs must be prepared and kept in a high state of cultivation which involves care and expense that must enter into calculation where large areas are concerned.

Whether the difficulty of getting sufficient help to harvest the crop, increases or not, the trend and tendency to get the marshes in shape for use of machines seems to be growing. Altho there are a number of growers who would be loath to abandon the old custom.

To popularize the harvesting would be another method of meeting a question, of current importance, and in this era of economic study, such a suggestion may be capable of realization.

Believes in Football.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 15.—"Football—the game—is one of the finest if not absolutely the finest sport for the development of young men to their best powers," said Dr. C. F. Hutchins, the new athletic director at the University of Wisconsin, who has just arrived at Madison, ready to assume his new duties at the opening of the fall semester. "The best physical development," he said, "does not mean the highest ability to lift or throw great weights; it does not mean merely the greatest accumulation of muscle. It means the development of the muscles to answer promptly and accurately to the dictate of the mind, just as the best mental development is that which fits the mind to respond to the will, and the highest moral development is that in which the will responds to the promptings of conscience. Football develops in a young man all of the best qualities—strength, speed, the right sort of courage, quick thinking, the absolute obliteration of self and the coordination of muscular effort."

"Though I am thoroughly familiar with conditions in the east regarding athletic matters," Dr. Hutchins continued, "I have yet to study the situation here in the west. However, I have no doubt that the temporary suspension of inter-collegiate football competition between the four largest universities will very greatly relieve the tension under which the game has been played here. No one can foresee what is going to be the most successful mode of operation in the development of the game, and there will, of course, be much experimentation. If there is to be no competition between the part of each of the universities to the new rules and regulations, there seems to be no reason whatever why any inter-collegiate contests should be forbidden. The new game should mean that the teams will be much more evenly matched, more uniform, and with the more open play made necessary by the new ten yard rule, the game should require of the men more speed than weight, and should substitute prompt action in emergency to the old following of pre-conceived maneuvers."

"In carrying out the provisions of the recent athletic conference of the college section of the North-Central Association, all inter-collegiate activities, as well as those confined to the student body at Wisconsin, will be regulated by the department of physical training, which now embraces both indoor and outdoor work. The provisions of the conference are too well known to require repetition. As heretofore, the members of the freshman and sophomore classes, who have compulsory gymnasium work, will be privileged to substitute work in the other branches of indoor and outdoor sports to the extent that the work elected shall be equivalent."

"One method on which we shall depend largely for getting out the main body of the men for athletic sport, is a competition between the various colleges in the university. I believe in competition. We hope by putting the men of the colleges of engineering, law, agriculture, and letters against each other in teams for the various sports, to stimulate to even greater and more general interest and enthusiasm all the men in the various departments. The cross-country work will be one of the first branches of athletics, after football, to be organized. There then will be the basketball, gymnasium, and track teams, base-ball nine, crews, hockey, and tennis a sport which many men not fitted for other sports can enter, since it takes a different form of nervous organization. Other sports that have never been developed here admit of possibilities, such as association football, and lacrosse. These are among the physical possibilities for the future development of the department. Taken all together, these sports give a good many avenues for the development of young men, aside from the regular gymnasium class work."

BABCOCK. Reuben Babcock moved out of his house which he recently sold to A. E. Reed's mother. He moved three doors further north, on the same side of the street.

Babcock can now boast of a good sidewalk to his new house. The children can walk as they wish to school and dry about in wet weather. It is a much needed improvement.

P. W. Merrill spent Saturday and Sunday visiting friends at Vosper. Mrs. Elmer Ward and Oella McKown went up to Orono on the morning train Saturday to visit friends.
